

Your travel4seniors.com editor's camera captured this recent scene from an apartment balcony just as the autumn day was ending. Coincidentally it was just a few city blocks from the location of the famed 1950 movie. Remember Gloria Swanson loving and finally shooting William Holden at her Sunset Boulevard mansion? And then the famous ending line, "I'm ready for my close-up, Mr. DeMille." When your travels take you to Los Angeles, be sure to enjoy a drive by the mansions on Sunset Boulevard. When the movie was made, the average home price there was $50,000. Now the same properties sell for $10 million and up.
