

The busy city is already one of the world's most popular tourist destinations. And now that one of the major sports events of the decade is scheduled to happen there, hotels and other facilities are already jammed with reservations. If you'll be there for the popular event, start making your bookings and other plans now!

If you'll be in Japan during the Olympics schedule from Friday, July 24 through Sunday, August 9, it's not too early to start your reservations now. Already high hotel rates will only go higher, and as the Olympics approach, everything in Tokyo will get much less available and more expensive. Make your plans with a trusted travel agent or online service that will assure you the best and most economical in everything in the Japanese capital, including travel schedules, hotel, dining and other needs for an Olympian-sized journey.