

Now they'll never fail ya, as they grab your genitalia! The Transportation Security Administration has increased its physical search procedure on air passengers. Calling it "universal pat-down", TSA insists it "continues to adjust and refine our systems and procedures to meet the evolving threat and to achieve the highest levels of transportation security". In other words, more crotch gotcha. So, on that next flight, be sure you and your intimate body parts are prepared for closer scrutiny.