

First of all, there ain't no such thing as cheap gas. Ask the oil-rich Saudis, their crooked American oil company pals and your unfriendly neighborhood gas station owner. They greedily started hiking prices in the 70s, and the never-ending inflation is still destroying our economy.

Before filling up, check advice about when and where to find the lowest-priced gas at the stations. Maybe if you do it right, you'll save a few bucks. However, as long as the phony inflation continues, you'll be paying way more than it should be. And, of course, plan the ultimate way to fight the greedy oil thieves. Make your next car electric or hybrid. www.usatoday.com/story/money/2019/04/09/gas-prices-gasbuddy-best-day-to-fill-up