

Is your old infantry division from the Korean War getting together in New York soon? Are old crewman from your World War 2 ship gathering in Vegas? Will your Marine fighter squadron mates who fought in 'Nam in the 1960s be gathering in Manhattan in the near future?

Do we have to remind you nor your former barracks buddies or shipmates that you're not getting any younger? Make a special effort to attend the next reunion to renew old friendships and relive shared memories of your service times together.

Or if so inclined, volunteer to be the organizer and host a military reunion you create in your home town. Many major hotel chains schedule such events, and expert staff can help you with your plans.
