

USA Today recently posted an article showing about a dozen travel photo situations the writer considers have become too cliché. Of course, senior wanderers are aware of such familiar scenes as pushing the Leaning Tower of Pisa, the selfie stick group shot and forming a finger heart in front of a sunset.

Your travel4seniors.com editor still believes whenever we see a creative new photo situation on our journeys, we should record it to send to family and friends. However, we disagree with the idea that all the old, tried-and-true camera clicks should be forgotten. If you want to pose toppling the Tower of Pisa or get the gang to grin at your selfie stick, go to it!
