

It could be a screaming baby, a yakker next to you, aisle noises and/or loud engine sounds. If it's grossly overwhelming, you can ask the attendant to move you to another seat. Or you can solve the problem by blocking out the pain in the ears. Before your next flight, check for the latest in portable noise-reducing earphones and electronic video and sound devices.