

If you're enrolled in the Uber Platinum or Diamond plans, and have the cash or business expense account, you can book it. That way you'll avoid the slow two-hour ground traffic to and from the John F. Kennedy Airport.

Of course, it'll cost a bit more than a cab ride, from $200 to $225 each way, and more during the busiest hours. The choppers are owned and operated by HeliFlite, based in Newark, N.J., each with a two-pilot crew. For more info, go to www.uber.com/blog/new-york-city/uber-copter